ABA NEWS

American Bar Association President William T. Gossett today suggested to student protesters a different "frame of reference for confrontation — not the confrontation of four-letter words and slogans, but the confrontation that can in fact bend and shape institutions to serve the best of human purposes."

Gossett, a Detroit lawyer, spoke on "The Politics of Dissent" at the Winter Commencement of the University of Michigan where he was awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree.

He called this the "most committed, most intelligent, most idealistic college generation in this nation's history" and said the spirit of protest on college campuses can have good results if it is properly channeled. But he warned that "obstructionist protest" can defeat the purpose of valid dissent and destroy positive values built over a long period of years.

The former general counsel of Ford Motor Company said he was aware that student dissent "is at root an act of patriotism and hope."

"We have seen too often those who equate dissent and disaffection with treason, thus brandishing all those who object to a policy or an act as unfaithful to America," said Gossett. "That view is worse than nonsense; indeed, it is dangerous. For it cuts out the middle grounds between the individual's absolute support of absolute rejection of America."

Gossett urged the graduates to be skeptical of the "absolute certainty" of their views.

"When a group protests the war in Vietnam, or university complicity with military research, by shutting down a campus or burning a professor's files or by other acts of brute force, it has done precisely what every totalitarian government has done," he said. "It has assumed the absolute and final truth of its perspective, and has denied any possibility of error."

He also warned young dissenters of the danger of self-defeat contained in methods of "upheaval and destruction."

"What kind of community of love is going to spring from the ashes of violence and disruption" asked Gossett. "What kind of moral imperatives will remain intact if your conduct denies the essential humanity of your fellow man — even if he did support the Vietnam War?"

The bar leader called on dissenters to recognize a distinction should "be made between institutions and processes" and that "this generation have the courage to consider the possibility of bringing about fundamental, substantial change of institutions through orderly and peaceful processes."

"Today there are young lawyers across this country who are posing challenges to injustice far more vital than a frenzied outburst of violent emotion. They have successfully fought for farmworkers in California against the federal and state governments. They have won battles against medieval welfare laws in New York. They are reaching into the roots of social legislation — into the highway and urban renewal programs, into health care programs; they are demanding that the rights of those minorities affected by these programs be fully protected in their frequently ignored constitutional dimensions."

"They are struggling against all of the elements that have denied the poor equal protection of the law — in criminal cases, against consumer frauds, against slum landlords. They are, in effect, waging a continuing dissent against the status quo every single day in the courtrooms of America. And they

Message From The Supreme Justice

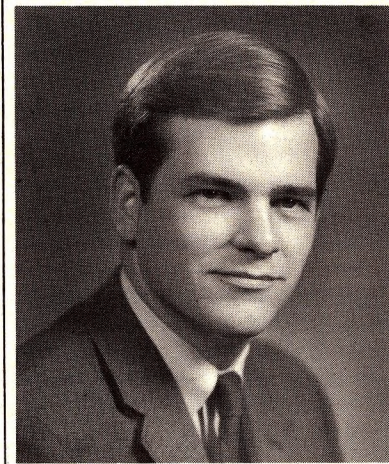

I would like to take this opportunity to review the progress of your Fraternity during the past six months period in this issue of The Reporter. As a preamble I wish to quote from John Morley of Blackburn who said, "Success depends on three things: who says it, what he says, how he says it; and of these three things, what he says is least important."

Judging from reports received from most of our Active Chapters, the fall rush period was very successful as it resulted in a great number of men being pledged to the "foremost professional law fraternity." Naturally, the next equally important step is the formal initiation of these men. The values of Phi Alpha Delta membership should require no persuasive arguments, even for those expecting a temporary interruption in their legal education as a result of the Selective Service Act. To postpone one's initiation is to postpone full participation and the resulting benefits derived from active membership in a chapter.

On other pages of this issue of The Reporter you will read in detail of the Honorary Initiations of all members of the Supreme Court of the State of Rhode Island; and all members, with one exception, of the Supreme Court of the State of Vermont. It was my great pleasure to participate in this initiation ceremony together with Past Supreme Vice-Justice Tom C. Clark, Supreme Historian Donald R. Moore and former District XI Justice Thomas R. Nelipowitz. The members of Phi Alpha Delta are honored by the welcome addition of these new Brothers and likewise I trust that each honorary initiate will enjoy his participation in PAD affairs.

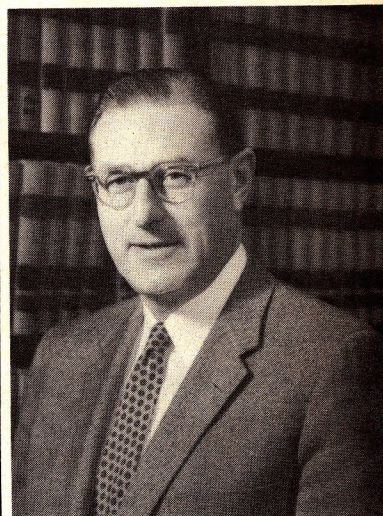

On December 7, 1968, the Carlos Alden Chapter was installed on the campus of the State University of New York at Buffalo. With the enthusiastic assistance of Dean William D. Hawkland (Magruder Chapter) and Assistant Dean George P. Smith, II (Hamill Chapter) 38 men were initiated as charter members, followed by the initiations of Judge Matthew J. Jasen and Edwin F. Jaecle as Honorary Members. I am confident that Alden Chapter will maintain a program of the highest standards and will be a strong contender in our chapter competitions.

The chairmen and members of PAD National Committees are considering such matters as: Faculty and Alumni Advisors, Alumni Relations, Conclaves, Endowment Fund, Professional Programs, Code of Honor, Inns of

PAUL M. KIMBALL

Paul M. Kimball is serving as Chairman of the ABA Law Student Division Evening Division Committee. He received a B.S. degree from the University of Oklahoma where he was a member of Delta Upsilon Social Fraternity. Brother Kimball expects to receive a J.D. degree this June from the Oklahoma City University School of Law where he is a member of Vaught Chapter, President of the Third Year Class, Vice President of the S.B.A. and Law Day Chairman. Brother Kimball also received the 1968 Phi Delta Phi Award for academic excellence and service to the school.

Court, Honorary Memberships, Judicial Clerkships, Congressional Staff Assistants, Placements, Publications, Rushing Methods, and Scholarships. The final reports from these committees will enable your officers and members to pursue the successful progress that Phi Alpha Delta has enjoyed. We must continue to look to the future, as PAD must always be progressive and never rest upon past accomplishments.

On January 24-26 your Supreme Executive Board will convene in Houston, Texas. I acknowledge the great assistance and encouragement that all members of the Board have displayed. A full report of the proceedings of this meeting will appear in the next issue.

It is my intention to recognize and emphasize the work of our many Faculty and Alumni Advisors throughout the realm of PAD. Their assistance is important to each chapter and experience has proven that their participation is invaluable. I wish to honor all these gentlemen who are so active in our Great Fraternity.

To each member and pledge of Phi Alpha Delta I express my sincere best wishes for a successful New Year.

Fraternally,
HENRY C. ROHR
Supreme Justice

Hughes Chapter Frolics

After a very active fall, members of the Hughes Chapter relaxed at the Silver Slipper Saloon in historical Central City, Colorado during the evening of November 15, 1968. Special arrangements were made by PAD member Burton Cawthorne who is the proprietor of the Silver Slipper. Western attire added authenticity to the gathering of wives, dates, alumni, and members who enjoyed singing many old western songs with a honky tonk piano accompaniment. Hughes Chapter would like to share some of Central City's interesting history with other fraternity members throughout the country.

Central City has been considered by many to be the most colorful town in Colorado. In 1859 several gold strikes were made. Even though a supposedly worthless claim was salted with gold dust, the news of a major strike carried around the world. Central City absorbed most of the camps in the area west of Denver and soon became the largest city in Colorado producing multi-millions in precious metals.

It was said that a bootblack in a hotel in Central City became rich by washing the rags that he used to clean boots, and panning the muddy water for gold. When a shaggy dog came into the hotel, he was given a place to shake the dust off and sleep. Then the area was swept and panned for gold.

Later Central City gave birth to culture in Colorado. Miners and dance hall girls were refined into a polished group. Before one play was performed, the theatre owner, by the name of George W. Harrison, gunned down a boxer named Charlie Swits by pumping thirty-five shots into him. Harrison's novel legal defense was based on the fact that he didn't like Charlie. Since the jury didn't like Charlie either, Harrison was acquitted.

Many notable performers came to Central City, including Lillian Gish, Louis Calhern, Faye Emerson and Helen Hayes. President Grant was perhaps its most distinguished visitor in 1873, the city fathers sent to Caribou for silver bricks and lined the entrance of the Teller House in order that Grant could walk on pure silver when he alighted from the stage.

Like many of the towns of that era, major fires ravaged the city and a diphtheria epidemic killed hundreds in 1879. The city was snowbound for two weeks in 1913 but still the town did not die. Today its population is increasing and it has a summer festival of cultural that is the highlight on the summer theatrical calendar from Maine to California.

So if you wish to enjoy theater or opera or maybe visit the past at Glory Hole, the richest square mile on earth, and search for bits of gold tailings, visit Central City. Don't forget to look up Burt Cawthorne at the Silver Slipper. When you get there, walk and don't drive. You will see and enjoy much more.
