Stephens Chapter Develops Own Juvenile Justice Program

The University of Georgia Stephens Chapter of Phi Alpha Delta has recently initiated an independent program for teaching legal concepts to sixth, seventh, and eighth graders in the Clarke County, Georgia school system. The Stephens Chapter Juvenile Justice program is, to our knowledge, the only totally local program of its kind being currently offered by PAD.

This teaching program was born of efforts by a local attorney, Mike Thurmond, to give grade schoolers some exposure to the law as it affects them. The original purpose of this program was to curb juvenile delinquency in one of the Clarke County schools. Mr. Thurmond's presentations were so effective that the Clarke County school system decided to expand the program to encompass all of its students in all of its schools.

With the help of Mr. Thurschool and civic leaders, the cher enters the classroom. In tinually expanding.

University of Georgia Law School PAD chapter has developed the original one-attorney program into a full-fledged curriculum. While Jim Lobb and George Schroeder serve as nominal heads of U. Ga's Juvenile Justice program, better than twenty actively involved law students make the program work.

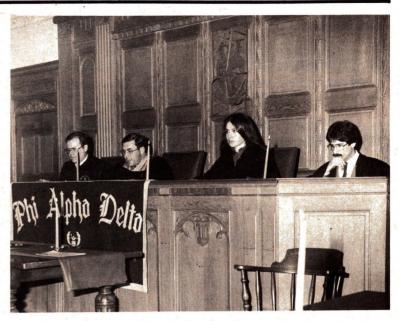

In this program, U. Ga. PAD develops its own classroom presentations and trains its own teachers. Some of the topics currently being taught include Juvenile Delinquency; The Bill of Rights and Correlative Responsibilities; Search and Seizure in the Schools; Good Citizenship; and International Law. Topics currently under consideration include explanations of Drug and Alcohol Laws; Repeat Offender Provisions; and Rights and Responsibilities after Arrest. U. Ga. PAD also maintains a continual quality control over program. Both presentations and the teachers' knowledge of evaluated and approved before mond and the encouragement of either the material or the tea- that keeps the program con-this way, the program maintains both its credibility with the school officials and its effectiveness with the students. And finally, while the program is also geared toward single classroom presentations, the program is designed to offer long term contact with the students. Indeed, the program's major impact thus far has been felt through the establishment of long term involvements, usually consisting of three to five presentations, given class by class to entire grades at a time.

The U. Ga. PAD Juvenile Justice program has made great gains since its inception in Fall, 1980, but there remains much to be done. Thus far only a small portion of the students in the Clarke County School System have been reached, and of these students, an even smaller portion have been exposed to the long term presentation format. The chapter's goals, to reach all all aspects of its Juvenile Justice the students with an in depth presentation, lie ahead and seem eminently attainable. It is those presentations must be the excitement and the challenge of meeting these goals

Wilson Reactivation Is Keynote Of District XIV Leadership Conference

Friday, February 27, 1981, was a red-letter day at the "Big Red" of Cornell University as the Woodrow Wilson Chapter was formallly reactivated.

The reactivation ceremony marked the kickoff of the two-day District XIV Leadership Conference. Delegates from all of the other seven Law School and Alumni Chpaters in the District attended the ceremony. The Cornell Law School Moot Court Room was decorated with the banners of the attending chapters as International Marshal Fredric Pearson led the installation team of District Justice Joseph A. Tringali, Carmody Chapter Justice Sandi Brooks, Starr Chapter Justice Eric Onore, Alden Chapter Justice Ronald Winter and Buffalo Alumni Chapter Justice Robert R. Marquardt, in the reactivation ceremony and installation of Wilson Chapter has a long and honorable history at Cornell, having been chartered on October 17, 1925. It counts among its outstanding alumni Honorable Edmund S. Muskie, Secretary of State in the Carter Administration. The Chapter became inactive in the mid-1960's.

The petitioners for reactivation were: Mildred A. Castmer, Susan V. Ferris, Peter A. Foris, Wesley P. Forystek, Regina J. Jones, Jeanne A. Markey, Steven R. Miles, Victoria L. Partner, Jane E. Ryer, Nancy Sivilli, Toni M. Sutliff, Caren Tracy-Long, and Patrick Scott Reid.

A champagne reception was held in the Student Lounge following the ceremony for new members, delegates and guests. The following day, twenty-three elegates met School to discuss mutual problems and areas of interest. The Conference was conducted in a roundtable format with various chapters assigned to lead the discussion in areas of their expertise. After a morning session of status reports and discussion of chapter problems titled "Nobody Knows the Troubles We've Seen", the conference swung into the afternoon session with "C'mon, Baby, Light Our Fire" by Alden and Middleton Chapters which focused on turning a chapter around. The Conference ended with "Tradition - Tradi-

PAD Helps Free Hostages

At the mid-year meeting of the American Bar Association, Chief Justice Burger discussed crime and punishment. He asked if we are not hostages within the borders of our own self-styled, enlightened, civilized country.

'Is a society civilized if it provides massive safeguards for accused persons including pretrial freedom for most crimes; defense lawyers at public expense; trials and appeals, re-trials and more appeals — almost without end — and yet fails to provide elemntary protection for its, decent, law abiding citizens?"

Chief Justice Burger suggested a survey of the wreckage and damage control program which included changes in bail laws, generous use of well supervised probation, and mandatory vocational and educational programs with credit against sentence to learn your way out of prison.

STEVE CLARK

These suggestions and observations are, without doubt, meritorious. Yet, Justice Burger perhaps should challenge the bar on another level, that which deals with prevention rather than rehabilitation. PAD's law related education effort is one such program.

Realize that one-half of the crimes committed in this country is committed by persons between the ages of eleven and eighteen. Shoplifting, which is committed primarily by young people, is over an eight billion dollar crime annually. Why do so many of these young people who live in this civilized society undermine the values of "decent, law abiding citizens?"

I believe the answer to be that they have little knowledge or understanding of our system of justice. They have no concept of how this system serves as a means to protect the values they hold dear. The participants in that system — judges, police, lawyers — are more science fiction to today's young people than R2D2 or Darth Vader of Star Wars fame. These individuals at even younger ages are developing values and judgments as to how well this system reacts and works for them.

For a young person to know a judge or district attorney by name or the difference between a misdemeanor and a felony is to equip that individual to work within the system to sustain and protect values.

A civilized society is one which guarantees all of its members to know how its system of justice works not just those who have run afoul of the law. Further, that enlightened society strives to achieve the communication of that information at early ages and stages of development rather than after values are fixed.

The annual cost of incarceration across this country is in excess of five thousand dollars per person. The cost of parole supervision can even exceed this. However, whether speaking of PAD's Street Law Program in Denver or those directed at elementary students in Fayetteville, Arkansas, at a cost of less than five dollars per person annually, each saves literally thousands of dollars by diverting potential offenders. Preventing crime is much more economical than treating it.

The damage control effort of which Justice Burger spoke, I submit must be amended to include law related education. Education which will free those whom the Chief Justice identified as being held hostage. PAD is leading the way in this effort. PAD, THE FOREMOST PROFESSIONAL LEGAL FRATERNITY, is making a difference.

You can be a part of that difference. Write Robert E. Redding, 910 17th Street, NW, Suite 310, Washington, DC 20006, for more information on PAD Law Related Education.

News From the Law School Chapters

Lamar Chapter at the University of Mississippi is the sponsor of a program that not only benefits the student-body but also the entire legal profession. The PAD legal research exchange is a completely student run organization that tackles difficult questions of law submitted by attorneys. The managers of the exchange are third year students selected by a committee consisting of the outgoing managers, the Chapter Justice and a Faculty Advisor. Once an attorney makes a contact with the Chapter and describes what materials he needs for the area of the law that he wants to be researched, a second or third year member is assigned to do the actual research. Once the research is completed, it is reviewed by a third year student, sent to the attorney and the attorney is then billed based on time and expenses. The law school supplies the chapter with office space and if there are any profits derived from the program, they go the law library.

deDiego Chapter at Catholic University Law School in Puerto Rico held an initiation of new members and honorary members at the Judicial Center at Ponce, Puerto Rico on October 23.

Mayor James D. Griffin of Bulfalo, New York was made an honorary member of PAD by Alden Chapter at the State University of New York in Buffalo on October 22. At the same time 77 new members were initiated into the chapter. Noted guests included Buffalo City Court Judge Frank Sedita. District XIV Justice Joseph A. Tringali and Dean Thomas E. Hedrick, Alden Chapter Faculty Advisor. Presiding over the ceremony was Justice Ron Winter.

Sutherland Chapter at the University of Utah is participating in a law related education program. It places members of its speakers bureau into high school classrooms as guest lecturers and into a court tour program for high school students.

Greener Chapter at Texas Southern University presented its annual tutorial for first year students last fall. The tutorial introduces new students to various writing and study techniques and the proper use of study aids and gives an overview of the law school faculty. Fall initiation was held in the courtroom of PAD U.S. District Judge Woodrow Seals.

Engle Chapter at the University of Pacific School of Law reports a busy and successful year. The fall quarter began with the Labor Day welcome back" party followed by a highly profitable book swap. Fall rush resulted in 46 new members who were initiated October 5 in ceremonies presided over by District II Justice Roger Cartozian. The chapter now has 93 members and has developed an outstanding reputation as a professional, social and service organization. The chapter combines a fine blend of social with professional activities well calculated to serve the needs of its members.

Under the leadership of Chapter Justice Sandi Brooks, Carmody Chapter at Syracuse University has completed one of its most successful semesters in recent years. Activities have included providing beer for freshman orientation, theme parties, Halloween liquor raffle, sale of Gibert's materials, use of PAD book board, civilian police rides, practice examinations and prison visits. Of great assistance to the chapter this year has been Faculty Advisor and law school Acting Dean Robert Anderson. The Chapter regularly publishes a PAD column in the law student newspaper. Spring plans include a welcome back party, a demonstration of polygraph and breath analyzer tests and K54 radar by State Police, local attorneys are also scheduled to discuss practical and theoretical aspects of different areas of the law. They also have scheduled a first year brief writing contest which is open to PAD members only.

Ryan Chapter at the University of Wisconsin held its annual fall banquet and initiation of members October 24. Their speaker was Wisconsin Lt. Governor Russell A. Olson.

An initiation of new members was held on October 24 by Vinson Chapter at the University Louisville. In attendance were International Justice Steve Clark, International Treasurer Larry Crigler, International Historian Jim Bierce and District Justice Jim Howard.

Monroe Chapter, Hamline University holds tennis, racketball and golf tournaments for students, faculty and staff, in the fall, winter and spring respectively. These events provide for an excellent interchange between faculty, staff and students. They have been organized by Chapter Justice Dave Odahowski and Lenard Axelrod. All participants received T-shirts and winners receive trophies or award certificate.

Burr Chapter at Dickinson School of Law has an excellent high school teaching program which is held at seven local high schools. The purpose of the event is to establish a working relationship between the law school and the community. The chapter provides the schools with lecturers on general and specific legal topics and offers mock trial presentation. Some 50 members of the chapter participate. The chapter also sponsors police rides for law students.

Last October, Beamont Chapter at California Western University School of Law sponsored the appearance of United States Secretary of Education and Former Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals Justice Shirley Hufstedler. Her appearance was sponsored as part of the chapter's professional speakers prgram. The Secretary spoke on "The Challenges of a Legal Career." In attendance were over 300 students, faculty and PAD alumni.
