PREFACE

The purpose of this booklet is to bring the widely scattered members of Phi Alpha Delta in closer touch with one another, and, especially, to facilitate the interchange of legal business among those who are in the active practice of the law.

The Editor, in compiling the work, has been tempted to include fraternity history, biographies, and pictures, but this was found impossible in a small volumn of handy size. It seemed best to arrange material in two sections—one including alphabetical classification of members, with brief personal data; the other including geographical classification, according to states, cities and towns.

When the directory blanks were sent to members to gather information, it was hoped they would be filled out with the same technical, legal skill as is used in court papers; but, alas, in some cases the Editor is still asking whether the member's name is John Doe or Richard Roe, and whether the location is East Aurora, New York, or Halley's Comet, Nowhere. In the finished work many errors will be found, but spare the Editor if you appreciate the difficulty of his task, and if for no other reason, spare him because he is a brother.

SAMUEL H. ROBERTS,

Supreme Justice.

Geographical Classification of the Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity

The same name frequently appears twice in the geographical classification, which usually indicates that the member has both a college and home address. An asterisk appearing before a name indicates the prospective location of a member who is at present in school. In a few instances the same name appears three times in the geographical classification, and in such case it usually indicates that the member has given his home address, his college address, and his prospective location. By referring to the alphabetical classification, the reader can ascertain whether or not the member is still in school, for the year of graduating class is there given. The abbreviation "C" stands for graduating class.

If the home address is given under the name, in the alphabetical classification, but the year of graduating class shows the member is still in school, then the reader should look for the name of chapter, which will indicate the location of the school where member may be addressed. The reader should always refer to the alphabetical classification to make sure of the present location of a member.
