Supreme Board Meeting at Kansas City

The Supreme Executive Board of the Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity held a very successful meeting at the President Hotel in Kansas City, Missouri, September 27th to 30th inclusive. The minutes of the meeting have been forwarded to National, District and Local officers, and are available to any interested member.

Among other things, the Supreme Executive Board formally approved:

(a) The transfer of the Hannibal Hamlin Charter from the University of Maine to Loyola University at Los Angeles;

(b) Authorized the appointment of a Board of Editors to assist the Supreme Editor in the publication of the Reporter;

(c) Provided for the presentation of suitable medals and certificates of achievement for scholastic accomplishments, such award going to the senior law student of each chapter maintaining the highest scholastic average during his period in law school;

(d) Instructed each district justice to visit each collegiate chapter in his district at least once each year or have one of his deputy district justices do so, at which time an official inspection is to be made and a report sent to the Supreme Secretary;

(e) Adopted a plan of senior sponsorship, under which it is proposed that the fraternity, working through the district justices, deputy district justices, alumni and collegiate justices, arrange for law firms located near the schools where collegiate chapters are maintained to sponsor the members of PAD during their senior year in law school. A PAD attorney or firm will be asked to take over the sponsorship of one senior and, as such sponsor, agree to open their offices to him during his senior year, to devote such time as may be necessary for the discussion of his problems and to, at some time during his senior year, take him entirely through the trial of one lawsuit. It is suggested that the senior be required to prepare all pleadings which are to be filed and which then may be criticized and revised by the sponsor; that he assist in the briefing of the points of law involved and that he sit with counsel throughout the trial of the particular case. It was felt that this plan would serve to associate the student with older men of the profession, that to some extent it would revive the advantages which formerly accrued to law students who were studying under the guidance of older practitioners; that it would bring the sponsors in closer contact with the law schools, with the collegiate chapters and with the young men and that every graduating PAD would have had the experience of going through one complete actual lawsuit before his graduation.

An extremely interesting luncheon was held at the President Hotel on Tuesday, September 28th. The following is a list of brothers who registered:

Modern Trend in Legal Education

MINNESOTA AND WISCONSIN

BY LLOYD K. GARRISON

Dean of the University of Wisconsin Law School and President of the Association of American Law Schools

WHEN I was asked by the editor of this Review to contribute an article on modern trends in legal education, it occurred to me that a concrete description of what certain schools were actually doing in practice and what they were planning to do might be of some value. As President of the Association of American Law Schools, I was authorized, and indeed under some obligation, to assist in inspecting member schools where inspections were desirable. The policy of the Association is to inspect periodically every member school. The schools listed above were selected chiefly because they had not, for a great many years, been inspected. I included Wisconsin (which was not technically inspected) only for the sake of making the sampling a little broader.

In what follows, though the account is by no means complete, I have tried to set forth the developments which seem to me of most significance and interest. A school is chiefly distinguished by the quality and morale of its faculty and student body—factors with which I shall not deal. I shall be dealing rather with policies, methods and plans. These factors are important, and I think worth describing, and worth all the study we can give them, provided always that the first essentials—men and morale—are not lost sight of. Fortunately, in the schools mentioned, these essentials exist.

All of the schools in question reflect the impact of the modern world upon the system of legal education evolved by Langdell and his successors. At least four principal matters are being given new attention and earnest study. They are first, the problem of the quality of the student body—how to select the fittest and weed out or discourage the unfit without at the same time destroying the essentially democratic makeup of the bar; secondly, active and continuous experimentation with new legal materials and teaching techniques, designed to supplement the somewhat arid content and monotonous method of the unalloyed case system; third, the effort to bring into legal education a broader philosophical understanding of law and society; and fourth, the recognition by law teachers of new ways, beyond their purely scholarly contribution, in which they can serve the legal profession and the administration of justice. I shall now describe as concretely as possible the form these developments are taking in each school.

I. The Quality of the Student Body

All the schools are making some attempt to stop at the point of entrance men whose chances for success are not good. The tendency is to place increasing stress on the academic record of the applicant for admission to law school.

Michigan, for example, requires a bachelor's degree except in the case of students who have satisfactorily completed a special three year pre-law course in that university; and even a bachelor's degree, whether from Michigan or elsewhere, is scrutinized, and some men with degrees are not admitted because of unsatisfactory records. Of those who take the special three year pre-law course—a hundred or more men a year—at least one-third are generally denied admittance at the end of the third year; are required to continue on and get their bachelor's degree; and are not necessarily admitted then. At present, a student at the end of the three pre-legal years must, to be admitted, have obtained an average of mid-way between a C and a B; and effective September, 1938, he must have what amounts to a B minus average. These rules are minimum requirements, and considerable discretion is exercised in rejecting applicants whose records, for other reasons, give evidence of scholastic weakness. The special three year pre-legal course is regarded as considerably stiffer in content than the normal undergraduate curriculum.

Northwestern similarly exercises discretion in accepting or rejecting applicants; as many as possible are interviewed personally by the Dean; and in doubtful cases his impressions of the interview may control the outcome. A minimum of three years of college with around a C plus average is required, a B average being required from some institutions. At Chicago, under the new 2-4 plan, which goes into effect next fall (a minimum of two years of pre-law plus four required years in law school), every applicant, with some exceptions in the case of men with at least a B plus record and satisfactory recommendations, will be interviewed either by the Dean or the Assistant Dean, or possibly by an alumnus in special cases. The results of that interview will be considered together with the pre-law record and recommendations by the applicant's teachers.

Minnesota, which like Chicago, will require, beginning next fall, four years of law school work, with two or more years of pre-law study, has been requiring merely a C average for admission, but the desirability of increasing this requirement and adjusting it to particular institutions is now under consideration. Illinois requires a bachelor's degree, or three years of pre-law work at Illinois with at least a C average. The Wisconsin faculty has voted, subject to the approval of the regents, to require either a bachelor's degree or what amounts to a C plus average on three years of work either at the University of Wisconsin or elsewhere.

As a further guide toward formulating entrance requirements, all of the schools mentioned have been experimenting, and all but Chicago are still experimenting, with various legal aptitude tests, but there seems to be some skepticism as to their value. At Wisconsin we have studied, in addition, the correlations between law school success and success in the aptitude tests which all freshmen in the university are required to take; but we have found thus far that the correlations between academic records and law school success are closer than those derived from either the freshman aptitude tests or the particular legal aptitude test which has been used. Illinois and Minnesota have made special studies of the correlations between academic records and law school success, and these have proved to be reasonably significant.

In addition to formal requirements for admission, some effort is also being made to persuade pre-law students whose chances are not very good to choose some other occupation than the law. At Minnesota, for example, the Dean gives two talks each year to the pre-law students in the University explaining the connection between academic and legal attainment, while in Illinois the pre-law men have formed an association under law school auspices which meets about once a month to discuss with members of the faculty all manner of questions including that of qualifications for practice. This association, which is a rather new undertaking, appears to have promise. It affords a medium for advising students not only about their courses and the law school requirements, but also about the nature of the legal profession and of various types of practice, thus enabling the students to make a more intelligent vocational choice.

Despite the relatively high entrance standards of all the schools, at Illinois from a third to a half of the law students are eliminated at the end of the first year; at Minnesota around one-third, at Chicago and Michigan from a quarter to a third; and at Northwestern and Wisconsin around one-fifth or a little less. These figures, of course, fluctuate from year to year, and are only roughly approximate. The eliminations after the first year do not appear to be substantial; they may be a little higher at Wisconsin than in the other schools because of a rising grade requirement in the second and third years.

My own opinion is that as we perfect our techniques for predicting success in law, and prevent or discourage the weaker men from entering law school by appropriate entrance requirements, we can afford to bear down less heavily on those who are admitted. The flunking out of law students is to them a costly and tragic affair, and wherever possible the elimination should be at the threshold rather than later. The problem necessarily is one of degree and will vary from school to school.

Character, of course, is quite as essential as intellect, but, save in flagrant cases, we have not yet discovered how to detect those weaknesses which lead to unprofessional conduct in later life. Lectures in legal ethics are given at Chicago by Judge Evans of the Circuit Court of Appeals, and more expanded courses dealing with various aspects of the legal profession, including its ethics, are given at the other schools, the most ambitious of these courses being at Northwestern where biographies of great judges and lawyers, among other books, are read and reported on by the students. But, while all of us agree that these courses are worth giving, we are also agreed that character cannot be taught and that the influences radiating from campus life and from daily contact with men of integrity count more than any instruction. So far as instruction is concerned, certain courses, which I shall describe later, dealing with the problems of administering justice and the philosophy of law, are quite as important as legal ethics in developing a professional conscience.

At Chicago and Illinois the majority of the students and at Northwestern all of the students are organized in junior bar associations affiliated with the Illinois State Bar Association. These associations, among other things, arrange for meetings with outside speakers and appoint two members to represent their school in an annual inter-school moot court competition sponsored by the State Bar Association, in which other Illinois law schools similarly participate. At Illinois and Northwestern all examinations are conducted under the honor system, and the student bar associations help to instill in the student bodies a wholehearted acceptance of the trust imposed in them.

II. Experimentation in Legal Materials and Teaching Methods

Among the things which most impressed me in my visits was the extent to which professors were using their own specially selected materials in class, either in the shape of their own previously published casebooks, or, more frequently, with mimeographed or litho-printed compilations. At Michigan over half, and at Northwestern nearly half, the staple courses are being taught from original materials of this sort, while at Illinois seven out of eleven professors are using their own case-books in one or more courses. Extensive use of mimeographed materials is being made at Chicago, and the output will presumably be increased under the new 2-4 plan to be later described. Several courses at Minnesota and Wisconsin are also being given in this form.

In these newer compilations the monotony of the cases is frequently broken by the reproduction and discussion of pertinent legislation, forms, extracts from treatises and law review articles, and special problems. The flexibility permitted by mimeographing or litho-printing enables the content of courses, at very little expense, to be varied from year to year by eliminating old matter or incorporating new as experience dictates and as judicial and legislative developments take place. New courses may also be readily constructed as need arises. Thus special courses in legislation, judicial administration, the legal profession, introduction to law, and others have made a general appearance.

There is a marked and apparently growing tendency to combine into a particular course allied or interdependent topics which used to be treated in two or more separate courses. Thus at Michigan, Northwestern, and Chicago, there are the now familiar courses in business organizations, comprising most of the older topics of agency, partnership and corporations, with new matter relating to reorganizations and kindred topics. Grouped together also in single courses at Michigan, Illinois, Northwestern and Chicago, under the heading of security transactions or credit transactions, are the older topics of suretyship and mortgages, with considerable space allowed for conditional sales, pledges, trust receipts, etc. Courses in creditors' rights or some comparable title (embracing bankruptcy, receiver-ships, garnishments, attachments, etc.) are being given at Michigan, Northwestern, Chicago and Wisconsin. Wills, trusts and future interests have been combined at Michigan, and a new course in fiduciary administration has been developed, while at Northwestern an elaborate new course in administrative law, given three hours a week for a year, includes some of the matter which used to be taught in public utilities, anti-trusts and labor law.

Along with this ferment of experimentation with materials, there are many departures in teaching techniques. There is, to begin with, a general effort to break the classes up into smaller groups. At Michigan and Illinois the first year courses and the larger second and third year courses are taught in two sections. Less extensive sectioning obtains at Chicago, and, due to smaller classes, at Northwestern, while to stimulate the first year classes periodic short examinations or quizzes are given at Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin.

To encourage original work the first year class at Northwestern is divided into six groups, each under a professor, and each student is required to write one extended paper on some legal topic each semester. A somewhat similar device is used at Wisconsin, applicable, however, to third year students. Individual work is further stimulated in all the schools by requiring briefing and argumentation. At Wisconsin the facts are drawn from pending cases before the State Supreme Court, and when each argument is completed the students are given the briefs of the lawyers to compare with their own briefs, and may later listen to the arguments when they take place in the Supreme Court.

Small seminars in which there are written papers and group discussions are offered in all the schools except Minnesota, but they do not bulk very large in the scheme of things, the students generally preferring to take the regular courses; and it is clear that other devices to stimulate original work are being more and more relied on, such as those mentioned, and certain special experiments which I shall briefly refer to.

One of these is Professor Kocourek's technique in his course in security transactions at Northwestern. He has constructed his own casebook, which contains, for each particular section or topic, first a group of cases (very greatly abridged both as to fact and opinion in order to permit the inclusion of a larger number) and then a group of problems whose solution can be arrived at by a study of the preceding cases. Unlike the ordinary course, these cases are not discussed in class. Each classroom hour consists of the analysis of an assigned problem. In addition, each student is required during the course to analyze in writing a certain number of the problems, the papers being graded in lieu of a final examination. I attended one of these classes and the procedure was as follows: The roll was called and each student was asked to state whether or not he would reverse or affirm the judgment of the lower court in the problem case. A student who favored reversal was then called on to argue his position. He rose and made his argument, basing it on an analysis of particular cases in the casebook. A student who was for affirmance made a similar argument from his point of view. Then followed another argument for reversal and another for affirmance. At the close of each argument the particular student was questioned vigorously by other students who took a contrary view. When the four arguments had been completed the problem was thrown open for general discussion, which completed the hour.

Professor Kocourek, who sat as a judge, announced that he would reserve decision and state his conclusions fully at the next hour. I was impressed by the vigor with which the students went at each other, and the evident stimulation which they got from having to tackle a problem in the way a lawyer would have to tackle it. The class, however, was a small one and the method might not be so easy to employ with large numbers, or with courses containing a great number of small subdivisions not justifying a full hour of discussion.

Many of the casebooks now in use contain a liberal admixture of special problems which are sometimes prepared for and debated in class, and are sometimes analyzed in written papers; indeed, the variety of special teaching devices which are being employed by different men almost defy classification. Professor Katz of Chicago, for example, in one of his courses which is scheduled for three classroom hours a week, has dispensed with two of the three classroom hours and uses the time to meet once a week separately with seven small groups into which he has divided the class for that purpose. He assigns special problems and questions to these students which are then discussed in the group meetings. He grades each student on his performance and is endeavoring to systematize the procedure.

III. Broadening the Social Outlook of Students

Legal education is straining to give students a wider view of the development and place of law in society. The problem is being attacked in various ways.

In the first place, there is an increased emphasis upon the public law courses. Not many years ago constitutional law was rarely, if ever, a required subject. Now it appears in the required first year curriculum at Northwestern (the first school, I believe, which took this step) and at Illinois and Wisconsin, and in the second year at Minnesota.

Not many years ago the field of legislation was in all law schools treated merely incidentally in those subjects where statutes were met with. Now special courses in the legislative process, dealing with such topics as the interpretation, content, scope, preparation, drafting, amendment, and enforcement of legislation are being offered in mimeographed form at Minnesota, Michigan, Chicago and Wisconsin. A course in current legislation, open to a limited number of the best students, is given at Northwestern by from three to five faculty members. The work consists of the examination and critical study of recent legislation and legislative proposals, both state and federal. It runs throughout the third year and provides, among other things, a way of getting wide cooperation among a group of teachers.

With the phenomenal growth of boards and commissions, administrative law, as might be expected, is assuming a new importance in most of the schools. It will be required, for example, at Minnesota beginning next year, and I have already referred to the very extensive course at Northwestern which, in addition, offers special courses dealing with workmen's compensation and the Interstate Commerce Commission. Other public law courses, such as taxation, labor law, and trade regulation are being increasingly emphasized in the various schools. International law, offered at Michigan, Northwestern, Illinois and Wisconsin; Roman law at Northwestern; the history of English law at Northwestern and (intermittently) at Wisconsin; Professor Wigmore's course in the world's legal systems; courses in co-operative organizations and automobile accidents at Wisconsin, and in radio law, aeronautical law, and commercial arbitration at Northwestern—all of these are symptomatic of the inroads being made on the old orthodox curriculum. And the attempts by individual teachers to weave into their substantive law courses sociological, historical, political and economic materials are further indications of the rapid shift in point of view that is taking place.

The problem now is chiefly one of time and partly of motivation. In a three year law curriculum there is not nearly enough time for a student to cover all these courses if he is to take the orthodox substantive law courses. And, particularly with bar examinations confronting him (except in Wisconsin where the graduates of the only two law schools in the state are admitted on diploma), the average student wants to stick to the bread and butter stuff. Hence, except where they are required, many of the courses I have mentioned are elected by only a handful of students, and a few of them are so rarely taken that they really exist only in catalogs. Yet they are felt to be important—perhaps, from the point of view of the future of the Bar and its contribution to society, more important than some, at least, of the more conventional subjects. These last, however, are what pull the students. What then is to be done?

An approach to the time problem is under consideration at Wisconsin. It has been suggested that a number of the longer courses be offered concurrently in a shorter form, in which no attempt would be made to cover the same territory, but in which the student would at least be introduced through cases, and perhaps text materials, to the most fundamental concepts. After the first year each student would be required to elect approximately one quarter of his work in the short-form courses (which would run, say, three hours a week for five weeks), and the remainder in the long form. In this way the student would be able, in his three years, to take nearly all of the subjects in the curriculum, except a few specialties like patent law. A short-form course in partnerships along these lines at Wisconsin, based on mimeographed cases and statutory problems, has proved successful. Whether such a plan will be feasible remains to be seen.

Minnesota, with its 2-4 course, has approached the question of time and also of motivation in an entirely new way. The 2-4 course was established optionally in 1931, but beginning next fall four years in law school are to be required of all students whether they have taken more than the required two years of pre-law or not. The four years consist of the following: (1) The orthodox first year of law; (2) a prescribed second year of substantive law subjects; (3) a third year consisting of prescribed courses in procedure with electives in other law fields; and (4) a fourth year with required courses in judicial administration, jurisprudence, legislation, and administrative law (or labor law and trade regulation) plus electives in law subjects or in courses given by the college. In practice the students have not elected the college courses. Thus the effect, in comparison with the 3-3 course, has been to shorten the college content, and increase the legal content, of the six years. To some the reduction in college training may seem like a step backward, but on behalf of the plan a number of things are pointed out.

First, the required courses of the fourth year are the equivalent in time of at least half a college year, and in point of effort and active interest may be worth considerably more. Judicial administration, for example, contains much history and some political science and government; jurisprudence is thought to be fully the equal of any college course in philosophy, and of more value to the student of law; while the course in legislation contains a large quantity of readings and materials in political science and government, and, to a less extent, history. Administrative law (or labor law and trade regulation), also required, may similarly be regarded as equivalent to college courses in government or poli-

Secondly, it is believed at Minnesota that students who stay on in college after two years are apt to develop poor work habits, and that it is better to start their professional training at that point, capture their interest, and then, building upon that interest, introduce them to some of the fields of learning which, if they had taken them in college, would have seemed less significant.

Thirdly, most of the men in the 2-4 course who begin their college work at Minnesota elect a two year pre-law curriculum worked out by the law school, in which foreign languages and the natural sciences are not required, thus leaving room for more extended work in history, political science, economics, sociology and philosophy. Moreover, a number of courses in these fields are prescribed, including philosophy, logic (with some use being made of Wigmore's "Principles of Judicial Proof"), ethics (with some consideration of legal ethics and of Julius Henry Cohen's "Law: A Business or a Profession?"), government (a special course in the evolution of governmental institutions to be taught next year by a graduate of the Harvard Law School), and English constitutional history. Most of these courses are taught in special sections or classes consisting of pre-law students only, and the effort will be to relate them increasingly to the law. It is felt that this two-year program represents in cultural value at least as much as is represented by the three years of haphazard electives and of required languages and sciences which most undergraduates go in for. At the end of the second year of law the degree of Bachelor of Science in Law is awarded.

The 2-4 plan at Chicago, which goes into effect next fall, differs sharply in arrangement from the Minnesota plan. The first year at Chicago is to consist of: (1) a beginning course in procedure; (2) contracts and quasi-contracts; (3) family relations; (4) torts; (5) legal methods and materials, which, in part, is an elementary course in jurisprudence along original lines; (6) a course in psychology "relevant to the study of substantive and procedural law," to be taught by Professor Adler, who is trained in law as well as in psychology and philosophy; and (7) English constitutional history, to be taught by an historian not on the law faculty.

The second year, which will be prescribed, is to consist, as stated, of property and criminal law and also of courses in sales, business organization, procedure, government, economic theory, and accounting. The third year is to be largely prescribed and will consist, in addition to staple law courses, of courses in public finance, legal history and ethics. The course in ethics will consider "ethical principles and their relation to law; standards of reasonableness, concepts of economic justice as related to notions of fair price, fair wage and usury; the bearing of ethical analysis upon ideas of natural law, due process, and related concepts."

One-half of the work of the fourth year will be prescribed; the other half will be elective, but students will be required to concentrate their elective work in two of the following general fields: crimes, marketing and credit, property, economic and business organization and regulation, government, civil procedure, and history and theory of law. In each of these fields the studies will be a mixture of law and the social sciences. In general, the details of the second, third and fourth year programs have not yet been worked out.

Similarly, at Chicago, the four years in law school are to be obligatory whether the students have had more than two or three years of pre-law work. Students who enter with four years of pre-law work will be allowed to take the four annual comprehensive examinations in three years. The plan differs further from the Illinois experiment in that all the courses, whether taught by law men or not, will be given in the law school, will be open to law students only, and in the social science fields, will be related as intimately as possible to the law work. It is hoped also that at least one or two social scientists will be attached to the law school faculty and will conduct all or most of their teaching in the law school, so that there will be the closest possible collaboration with the law teachers; and joint seminars and jointly conducted courses will probably be worked out.

Except for Minnesota and Chicago, none of the other schools appears to be moving toward a reduction of the amount of pre-law study; if anything, the movement is in the opposite direction and toward the ultimate requirement of a bachelor's degree in all cases before beginning law school. Most of these schools recommend to students interested in law certain pre-law courses on subjects in the field of the social sciences. At Wisconsin an attempt is being made to work out a pre-law major in the social sciences cutting across the ordinary requirements of concentration in some one department, and plans are under consideration for a special course in introduction to law to be given at the start of the sophomore year to pre-law students in order to give them not only some notion of the function of law in society, and what law is, and how courts operate, but also to indicate the implications for those who are going to be lawyers of the various courses in the social science field which the students will be taking.

IV. Faculty Activities; Conclusion

It is a sign of the times that in all the schools many faculty members are engaged in work of a quasi-public nature, such as the drafting of legislation, the giving of legal advice to governmental agencies, service on committees appointed by bar associations or governments, participation in judicial councils, and carrying on research in connection with these and similar activities. This shift from the purely scholarly studies and writings of a generation ago toward public service is of much significance and will in its own way, as it has already begun to do, bring a new air of reality into law school classrooms.

Symptomatic also of the impact on law schools of the changing institutions and concepts of government which characterize our age, are the expansion of the public law courses, already referred to; the operation of an Air Law Institute and a Scientific Crime Detection Laboratory by the law school at Northwestern; the drafting of legislation by certain law review editors at Wisconsin, and by students in the legislation course at Minnesota and perhaps elsewhere; the rotating apprenticeship of post-graduate law fellows at Wisconsin in governmental departments and commissions; and the sponsorship by various schools of meetings and forums on questions of public law.

There is some risk that the immersion of teachers and even students in contemporary problems, if carried too far, may crowd out the devotion to scholarship without which education degenerates and long-range problems are neglected. I do not think the danger point has yet been reached, for in all the schools there are many men, who, to paraphrase Justice Holmes, have set their course by stars they have never seen and are digging by the divining rod for springs they may never reach. But if we are not careful, there is some chance that the acclaim given to external activities, the excitement of participation in them, and the very substantial aid which law teachers can give to the profession and the public in the solution of their current difficulties, may result, first, in distracting the attention of too many potential scholars from the central task of producing for the future and not merely for the present; secondly, in a tendency to select teachers whose tastes and capabilities run toward the outer world rather than the inner quest; and thirdly, in the diversion of a disproportionate amount of available funds and man-power to undertakings of merely immediate value.

To counteract any possible danger in these directions, I should think it might be well for the law schools to take stock of their research activities; to compare notes; to co-ordinate their efforts and their plans; and to serve notice that the age-old task of scholarship is still their first consideration. This word of reminder is not intended as a disparagement of the generous response by law teachers to the needs of their times—a response which perhaps has been too much lacking in the past. Certainly there must be room for both kinds of activities, which in a sense overlap and supplement each other. The only question is one of proportion and of emphasis. If we do not forget that there is such a question we shall not be likely to go wrong.

In conclusion, I venture the assertion that with the changes already made in law school curricula and methods, and those which are in progress, legal education, not many years hence, while still based upon a solid core of substantive law and employing the case method as the predominant technique, will in its supplementary techniques and content and in its whole outlook and dynamics, have achieved a thoroughgoing readaptation to the needs of the modern world.

ACTIVE CHAPTER NEWS

BLACKSTONE

Chicago-Kent College of Law

The officers of Blackstone Chapter held several meetings during the summer vacation to discuss plans for rushing, and also to discuss the problem of making a gift to the school. Chicago alumni of the chapter contributed generously to a fund which was intended to be used for providing a new and improved lighting system for the library at Chicago-Kent College of Law, but it developed that the proposed indirect system was too expensive, both as to initial cost and as to upkeep, so a substitute plan is being considered.

Vice-justice Schmacher attended the summer session of the University of Colorado Law School, and returned with glowing accounts of the scenery and atmosphere.

Four PAD graduates of June 1937, who took the Illinois state bar examination in September were successful in passing. The fortunate men were Brothers Jack Lannon, Les Bern, Joe Clarke and Bart Fisher.

The Chapter has already held several smokers this semester, which have resulted in the pledging of seven men, all of whom are in the first or second year of school. One of the pledges is the freshman who had the highest average in his first semester in school, for which he received the copy of Black's legal dictionary given each semester by Blackstone chapter.

The chapter looks forward to a general betterment scholastically. This is occasioned by the rise in its standing during the last terms, when it attained third position among the fraternities at Chicago-Kent. The actives are now striving for first place, and the splendid records of Brothers Harry Auspitz and Sidney Hines, initiated last June, brighten the outlook considerably.

The officers of Story and Webster chapters have honored Blackstone smokers, and the three chapters are, at present, contemplating some joint parties for the winter months. The district and alumni officers of PAD have also rendered valuable advice and assistance. Blackstone acknowledges its gratitude to George Fink, Ed Hale, Bob Owen and Phil Brennan.

Stetson University

Another distinguished Floridian became a member of PAD when Governor Fred P. Cone was taken into the bond of Phi Alpha Delta by David Brewer Chapter on November 12. Brother Cone is the fourth Florida Governor within recent years to become a PAD.

Outstanding among the numerous Stetson Homecoming festivities was the annual PAD breakfast which brought together seventy-five members of the fraternity from all over the state. The principal address was delivered by Florida's chief executive. Short talks were given by Bert Fish (Brewer) minister to Egypt and Congressman Joe Hendricks (Brewer). J. Edwin Larson (Fletcher) U. S. Collector of Internal Revenue was also present.

Brewer chapter is fortunate in having an outstanding pledge group from the first year class. The pledges are Ward Hunter, Jasper; Neil MacMillan, DeLand; Wilton Rowe, Orlando; Tom Kirkland, Miami; J. B. Rodgers, Miami; Hal P. Kirkland, Marianna; Harris Lowry, Stuart; and John Cherry, Center Hill.

On October 12, Brewer Chapter initiated seven embryo lawyers and on November 12 three more initiates went through the ceremony. Judge E. L. Powe of DeLand, was one of the three initiated on November 12. Judge Powe is the grandfather of Robert L. Powe who is the clerk of Brewer Chapter. The new brothers initiated this fall include Governor Cone, Tallahassee; William Solomon, Jacksonville; Elwyn Middleton, Pomona; Eldon McLeod, Appalachicola; Robert Young, Sanford; Edward Warren, South Hill, Virginia; James McElroy, Orlando; Grady Crawford, DeLand; Aubry Stoudenmire, DeLand; and Judge E. L. Powe, DeLand.

For the first time in the history of Brewer Chapter, the local brothers and pledges went in for politics and brought home the bacon in a very impressive manner. Brother Eldon McLeod, made his first political venture and captured the presidency of the Senior Law class. Brother Robert Young was elected as Vice-President of the Senior Class, and Pledge Brother Pat Kelley is the Treasurer.

In the Junior Class, PAD is represented by Brother Elwyn Middleton as president, Pledge Brother Rodney Durance as vice-president, and Brother Grady Crawford as secretary.

Pledge Brother Thomas Kirkland is the head of the first year class.

CLAY

University of Kentucky

Clay Chapter's plan of alternate meetings is working out successfully. One week is devoted to business and the next to social activities. This balances the program and brings out good attendance.

Several of the brothers are engaged in scholastic activities. Sam Milner is business manager of the Kentucky Law Journal. Joseph Freeland is student editor and Charles Gaad, B. F. Moynahan, Jr., and Steve White are members of the editorial staff.

The College of Law is now preparing to move into its new building. The structure is of brick, air-conditioned and has glass brick windows with Venetian blinds in the library. Efforts are being made to obtain a chapter room in the building.

HAY

Western Reserve University

Among the alumni who attended an Active-Alumni Smoker at the chapter house on October 27, were Claude J. Parker, former District Justice; Wayne L. Townsend, Professor of Law of Western Reserve University; and Edwin D. Northrup, Deputy District Justice for the Cleveland District. Cider, doughnuts, gallons of coffee, an off-key kitchen quartet, and hours of interesting conversation and tall talk were events of the evening.

The chapter recently pledged the following men: Franklyn S. Judson, Wickliffe, Ohio; Lawrence C. Turner, London, Kentucky; William T. Walker, Lakewood, Ohio; Richard R. Burkhardt, and Russell Diehl, Cleveland, Ohio; and Hubert Marshall, Willoughby, Ohio. Formal Pledging was held at the chapter house November 8th.

Justice Townsend announced the appointment of a committee to organize and act as a Placement Bureau for graduating members of John Hay Chapter. Hudson Hyatt is chairman of the committee, composed of Joseph Hegedus, Jr., Albert B. Toth, and Robert Munn.

A Legal Aid Committee consisting of Brother Lloyd R. Townsend, Pledge Brothers Lawrence C. Turner and J. Lyman Bryan, Jr., has been appointed to supervise better study methods among members of the chapter.

Brother Robert S. Munn is the newly elected Justice of the Peace of South Euclid, Ohio.

A team composed of Brothers Santo Dellaria and Hudson Hyatt has entered the Moot Court Competition sponsored by the Student Bar Association.

Regular bi-weekly luncheons at nearby restaurants are a permanent feature of the Chapter program. In the future, alumni and actives will be invited to attend and address the group on topics pertaining to their special fields of practice or study.

HAMLIN

Loyola University

PAD'S newest chapter now has eleven active members and twelve pledges. Brothers Evan Sweet, Edmund Galtone, Z. M. Koistovich and Roger Kelly are the scholastic leaders of their respective classes.

The chapter has instituted bi-weekly luncheon meetings. On November 18, Supreme Secretary Frank M. Ludwick and Brother Kent Redwine, a member of the California Legislature, addressed the meeting.

The chapter is joining with PDP in planning an annual law school dance which will be held at the California Country Club on December 17.

HAMMOND

University of Iowa

With the enthusiastic assistance of PAD alumnus Hammond Chapter started the fall semester with an ambitious program. With the fine cooperation of Brothers Gaffney, Davis, Messer, Jackson and Morrison the chapter raised its membership to 23 actives. Rallies and smokers gained the attention of Iowa law students so that by the end of November a dozen new candidates were slated for initiation.

Plans for the winter season include Sunday night dinners, smokers, two social events and the annual Founder's Day banquet. Seminars for pledges are a regular part of the chapter's programs.

HOLMES

Stanford University

Holmes Chapter regrets to report that Justice William Peterson was unable to return to school this semester which caused a realignment of chapter officers. Perry Moerdyke Jr., former vice justice was elected justice, his position being filled by William Rohkam.

The first luncheon of the fall semester welcomed back to Stanford, Brother John B. Hurlbut, who had been appointed associate professor of law to replace Clark Whittier, retired. Brother Hurlbut had engaged in active practice since his graduation in 1931. All faculty PADs turned out for the occasion. They were Dean Marion Kirkwood, Professors Cathcart, Owens, Bingham and Turrentine.

At the second luncheon Professor Bingham gave a talk on "Realistic Theory of the Law." This type of meeting has met with the enthusiastic approval of the active chapter and will continue as a part of the regular program.

Lt. Governor Hatfield

Outstanding event of the semester was a banquet on October 22nd, at which Lt. Governor Hatfield of California, was guest of honor. An honorary membership in PAD was granted to the state's executive that evening. Brother Hatfield is one of Stanford's outstanding graduates, a Phi Beta Kappa and Order of Coif man. Brother I. M. Peckham, former United States Attorney introduced the honored guest. Immediately following the initiation formal pledging ceremonies were held.

University of Denver

Hughes Chapter is eagerly looking forward to a bigger and better year in 1937 and 1938. Steps are being taken to establish a closer connection with the Alumni members living in and near Denver. The chapter plans to have outstanding men in legal circles give short talks at their monthly meetings. Members of the fraternity are also to make brief talks on some phase of the law that has appealed to them. It is felt this will further the purpose of the Phi Alpha Delta Fraternity, establishing needed contacts, and make for mutual understanding among the brothers.

Brother Charles Ozias has obtained the Directors Room, Denver Rocky Mountain American Automobile Association for chapter meetings. All are quite proud of this place.

Harrison Loesch of Montrose, Colorado, was initiated into the chapter September 14th. Brother Loesch was one of the outstanding pledges at the law school last year.

Brother Davis L. Barker has been appointed Rush Captain for the year, and contacts are already being established with new men at the Law School.

The chapter eagerly awaits the results of the Colorado Bar Association. Some of the best men who were outstanding among the student body are waiting for the Bar to admit them as lawyers.

The Law School at Denver University had been partly remodeled to provide larger space for the library, a place for the librarian and an extra classroom.

JAY

George Washington University

On Monday night, October 18, Professor H. G. Spaulding, of the George Washington University Law School faculty and alumni member of the Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity was host to about 50 members of the John Jay Chapter and their guests. The chapter had as its guest speaker, Honorable Dean Aitchison, member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, also an alumni member of the fraternity.

Brother Aitchison's address dealt mainly with the relationship of the study of law to the work of the Interstate Commerce Commission. He stressed the necessity of the lawyer being able to cope with members of other professions by having a practical and working knowledge of their subjects. He said that lawyers should not confine themselves to legal knowledge but should develop a general knowledge of things.

After partaking of the delicious food served by Professor Spaulding, the chapter was favored with songs by Brother Aitchison and Professor Spaulding.

KENT CHAPTER

University of Idaho

Kent Chapter regrets to report that Robert Baker of Rupert, Idaho, a student of high standing and a member of the senior class, was killed in an auto accident at the beginning of the school year.

KNOX

University of Arizona

Weekly luncheons, meetings twice each month, smokers and entertainment are part of the very active program being carried on by Knox Chapter. Three formal pledgings this semester has accounted for 18 pledges.

At a recent smoker talks were given by the law professors. The evening ended with boxing bouts. At another meeting color motion pictures of deep sea fishing in the Gulf of Lower California were shown.

During the regular meetings pledging and mock trials are features of the program. The chapter is divided into contestants and jurors.

Four brothers passed the Arizona State Bar during the summer. They were Max Layton, Jack Rood, Byron Ivancovich and Gaynor Stover.

New York University

Though in the past Rapallo Chapter has seen several of its members elevated to the honorary position of "law review", its policy in the selection of its members has always been well within the spirit of that magnificently inspiring letter, so eloquently expressive of the qualities expected of PAD men everywhere, recently written by our Supreme Faculty Adviser, Professor Wilson. Rapallo has firmly established the precedent of accepting into its membership only those who measure up to these expectations. The chapter has already voted to bestow an award in the form of a gold fraternity key to the member who at the end of the school year shall have attained the highest scholastic record.

Brothers Conway, DiGangi, Derkasch, Galvin and Hocassio, were initiated into the chapter on November 19, at the Holly Hotel before a representative gathering of PAD men. Brother Constable of the Alumni chapter, and District Justice Brother McCove addressed the group.

The chapter has undertaken an ambitious program of lectures to be given at New York University by men who have attained distinction in their respective fields of the law. Brothers Scevarese and Hammer, members of the New York judiciary, and also Professor De Stoovere, as well as other prominent lawyers and professors will speak.

Regular monthly joint meetings of alumni and active members, are very successful and thoroughly enjoyable.

Another initiation is contemplated later in the year. The chapter is now decisive in its intenton to establish permanent quarters at Washington Square next year. A substantial increase in membership will permit the advantages of chapter rooms. A library, devoted to the exclusive use of PAD men, will be provided for. The active chapter will then extend an invitation to the alumni members and those brothers of PAD, visiting New York, to make these rooms their headquarters.

MAGRUDER

University of Illinois

Magruder Chapter continues to lead the five University of Illinois legal fraternities in scholarship. Phi Alpha Delta members of the Editorial staff of the Illinois Bar Journal are busy preparing notes for publication in the Bar Journal in the near future. Four of last year's seniors are engaged in work toward a higher degree in law at Harvard, Yale, Columbia, and Michigan.

On November 6, the chapter played a football game with the Phi Delta Phi chapter, PAD's winning by a score of six to nothing. Following the game the losing team treated the winners to a Dutch supper. The result of this game insured PADs first place in the law school football league.

Among the newly elected officers of the University of Illinois Junior Bar Association were William Burt, first vice-president, Willard Ice, second vice-president, and Roger Fruin, secretary, all of whom are members of Phi Alpha Delta.

REESE

University of Nebraska

Reese Chapter of Phi Alpha Delta reports an enthusiastic active class of 17, a pledge class of 13 and a chapter house filled to capacity.

Brothers Munson, Haley, Griffin and Nuquist who have charge of the Freshman study sessions find that the pledges are taking a keen interest in their work and enjoying their studies.

The chapter was host to the Law school faculty recently at a dinner and smoker. Brother Griffin proved his ability as a huntsman by supplying the ducks for the occasion.

The smoker and dinner was a success in that it gave the brothers and pledges an opportunity to become better acquainted with Nebraska Law school's newest professors, Mr. Taintor, II, who recently came to Nebraska from Louisiana and Mr. Lloyd Marti, attorney of Lincoln, who is again connected with the faculty.

Brothers of Reese Chapter successfully entered the law school political arena this year. Brother McMahon was elected as representative of the senior class and president of the board of directors of the Nebraska Law School Association. Brother Munson was elected as the other representative to the board from the senior class and Brother Limpricht represents the junior class. Pledge Cattle of the freshmen class serves on the board with them.

SUTHERLAND

University of Utah

A smoker was held during the second week of the quarter at which rush-ees were entertained. A very successful dinner-dance was held on December 4th.

Several of the brothers played in the annual Barrister-Medic football game. Practically all the brothers attended the Barrister-Medic party on November 12th.

Prominent local lawyers have consented to present talks giving phases of the law, not a part of the regular program of instruction, as a feature of future meetings.

Brother W. H. Leary, Dean of the Law School, has been confined to bed with an ear infection.

Do You Know Anyone In This List?

It is extremely difficult to keep our mailing list up to date because our members neglect to advise us of changes in addresses. Obviously none of the brothers listed below will see this list because mail cannot be sent to them. Read this list carefully and, if you can correct any addresses, jot them down on a postal card or a sheet of paper and send them to the Supreme Secretary's office, 333 Roosevelt Building, Los Angeles, California.

Perhaps someone will do the same favor for you sometime, who knows?

NEWS OF ALUMNI

Chicago Alumni

On Friday, October 22, the Chicago Alumni Chapter started under way for another successful year with the largest turnout for a monthly meeting in its history.

The chapter is sponsoring another rushing party for the local chapters. Last year, the party was a big success and many pledges were secured through it. This year, it's going to be bigger and better than ever.

The active chapters of Blackstone, Fuller, Marshall, Story and Webster with their rushees were present. The following PADs spoke on behalf of their chapter: (Blackstone) Donald M. Campbell, Judge James F. Fardy; (Fuller) Edwin F. Albertsworth; (Marshall) Ernest E. Puttkammer; (Story) Chief Justice C. J. Harrington, J. J. Cherry; (Webster) Judge Philip J. Finnegan.

Speaking on behalf of the National Chapter was Supreme Justice Dwight H. Green who discussed the American Bar Association convention, and also the meeting of the Supreme Board.

Cleveland Alumni

Cleveland Alumni Chapter started the fall semester off with a program of great activity. The annual picnic proved to be an outstanding success. Common Pleas Judge Brother George P. Baer acted as Master of Ceremonies and kept the "spirits" of the 40 odd brothers who attended very high.

For the third straight year the alumni baseball team defeated the active team. This year the score was 12-8. The feature of this nine inning tussle was two home runs by Dan Sammon of the alumni. There were only two errors committed by each team. (Seems as though the boys are "practicing up" for this annual game).

An innovation which looked and sounded like a political campaign was the game between Republicans and Democrats which ended with a score of 14 to 7 in favor of the Republicans. From all indications this will be the secondary athletic feature of each picnic as the boys got a load of politics off their minds.

Wednesday, August 18, was Phi Alpha Delta Day at the Great Lakes Exposition. About 100 members, wives and sweethearts attended a dinner at the Alpine Village Tavern at the "Expo". Brother Harold H. Burton, Mayor of Cleveland, commended the fraternity on its activity in the legal profession and the civic interests of Cleveland. Walter Zuber, alumni president, James L. Broz, Jr., alumni secretary, and Ross Mortimer were the committee in charge.

Harold H. Burton

Harold H. Burton, Hay Honorary '35, is mayor of Cleveland at the present time. He is running for re-election this fall and is expected to swing to victory by a larger margin than he did in 1935 when his 40,000 vote plurality set a new record in the City of Cleveland. (Ed. NOTE: He did.) The Mayor incidentally finds time to attend all local P A D functions and is very active in P A D work. He was the feature speaker of the program which was broadcast on PAD night from Cleveland in 1936. At the present time the following members of Hay Chapter are connected with the city government: Robert Burri, Hay '22, Assistant Welfare Director, Daniel F. Sammon, Hay '27, Assistant Police Prosecutor, James L. Broz, Jr., Cleveland Alumni Secretary, Hay '30, Attorney to the Purchasing Agent.

James V. Suhr

James V. Suhr, former officer of the Cleveland Alumni Chapter, was elected to the highest office in the American Legion of Ohio, namely, the Department Commander, at the convention at Columbus in August 1937. He is '38 years old, a native of Norwalk, Ohio. He served over seas with the Anti Aircraft Battalion and upon his return from France was graduated from Western Reserve University in 1921 with AB degree and Phi Beta Kappa honors. He is a member of the Sigma Nu social fraternity. He graduated from Western Reserve University Law School in 1923. He is a member of the firm of Caldwell, Prasse and Suhr. The two partners, as well as four other members of the firm, are PADs from Hay Chapter. He is a member of the East Cleveland Post No. 163 of the American Legion and has been very active in Legion work in Cleveland and the State of Ohio. He has been chairman of the Cuyahoga County Council, a District Commander, and the Ohio Department Chief Commander in 1936. He also served as legal counsel for the American Legion, 1936 convention corporation of Cleveland. A dinner is being planned for September 30 at which Brother Suhr will be the guest of honor.

Denver Alumni

① Twenty PADs attended a meeting in Denver on November 15th, to formulate plans for the reorganization of the Denver Alumni.

A committee of three was appointed to canvass the entire list of PAD in Denver for a luncheon meeting at a future date. JOHN GRIFFITH, Clerk of the Denver County Court was appointed Chairman of the committee. He is a former justice of Gunter Chapter. The other members of the committee are BYRON ROGERS, Attorney General for the State of Colorado and LANSFORD BUTLER, attorney in Denver.

CHARLES E. LANE, the PAD District Justice from Cheyenne, Wyoming attended the meeting.

New York Alumni

At the joint meeting of Rapallo Chapter and the New York Alumni Chapter at the Midston Club on October 29th, a suggestion was made that each of the Phi Alpha Delta Alumnus in the metropolitan area be circularized with reference to employment of active chapter members or of recent law school graduates.

The suggestion is this: If you have full-time employment or part-time employment of any nature; of even so minor a nature as assisting on one case or in one matter for a day or so; get in touch either by mail or telephone with Brother John T. Leal, Jr., 39 Lynwood Road, Scarsdale, New York. Telephone: Scarsdale 4106. Brother Leal has agreed to act as a clearing house for such employment. He will constantly keep on hand a list of Brothers available for employment and upon receipt of your notification, will contact the most suitable person and advise you either by telgraph or telephone when he will report.

The November meeting of the New York Alumni was attended by Brothers Palmer, McCool, Rutledge, Hammer, Penny, Ambrose Arnold, Quinn, Myers, Halla, Curtis, Ellis, Verilli, Finn, Brown, Ahl, Moore and Walters.

New members present were Allen W. Maddren, G. Edward Stamm, Joseph Kelly, Winthrop Travell, Vincent O'Conner, Robert Fellows, Phillip Matthews, George Russell, Eznick Bogosian.

The meeting was somewhat informal and concerned new members; discussion of their problems; and the benefits of the chapter.

Oklahoma City Alumni

At an enthusiastic meeting at the Biltmore Hotel in Oklahoma City on September 24th, presided over by the Supreme Secretary, the Oklahoma City Alumni Chapter was revived after several years inactivity. One of the interesting things about the meeting was the large percentage present of younger alumni.

The following officers were elected;
 REX BELISLE, Fidelity National Bldg., Justice.

BILL MILEY, First National Bldg., Vice Justice.

ELLIOT FENTON, American Natl. Bldg., Treas. Clerk.

ED THEUS, First National Bldg., Marshal.

After the reorganization of the alumni chapter there was considerable discussion as to ways and means of assisting Harlan Chapter at the University of Oklahoma. Brother Floyd Wright, Professor of Law at the University was present and offered many valuable suggestions.

In connection with the increased activity of Phi Alpha Delta in Oklahoma, Supreme Justice Green announces the appointment of LYNN HORTON (Harlan) as Deputy District Justice.

Honorary Member

HONORABLE CLAUDE PEPPER, of Tallahassee, Florida, junior United States Senator, was initiated as an honorary member of Duncan U. Fletcher Chapter of the Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity at Gainesville on Friday, October 29, 1937.

After the initiation ceremony, a banquet was held in his honor. J. EDWIN LARSON (Fletcher), of Jacksonville, Collector of Internal Revenue, acted as Toastmaster. The address of welcome was given by JAMES C. HUNTER (Fletcher), Justice of the Chapter. J. LANCELOT LAZONBY (Fletcher), prominent Gainesville attorney, introduced Senator Pepper. In his address on "The Lawyer and Social Evolution," Senator Pepper discussed the system of law, its advantages and disadvantages, and then gave his comments on the same. The lawyer, Senator Pepper said, must keep pace with social progress and the changing needs of the times.

Among those present were Dr. JOHN J. TIGERT (Fletcher) of Gainesville, President of John B. Stetson University; JUDGE AUGUSTINE V. LONG, of the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Florida; JUDGE H. L. SEBRING; State Senator LUCIUS BLACK; COLONEL E. G. BAXTER; DEAN HARRY R. TRUSSLER, of the College of Law; PROF. ROBERT S. COCKRELL; PROF. CLIFFORD W. CRANDALL; PROF. JAMES W. DAY; PROF. DEAN SLAGLE; PROF. CLARENCE J. TeSELLE; guests from the student body and many prominent alumni from over the state.

Following the banquet, the Chapter joined with Kappa Alpha and gave a smoker in honor of Senator Pepper. Speaking informally there, Senator Pepper related many interesting things about Washington and the life of a Senator.

Senator Pepper succeeded the late HONORABLE DUNCAN U. FLETCHER, senior United States Senator, and patron of the Chapter.

Bar Appointment

John R. Snively

JOHN R. SNIVELY (Magruder), of Rockford, Illinois, has been appointed as chairman of the standing committee on state legislation of the American Bar Association by Arthur T. Vanderbilt, of Newark, New Jersey, president of the association.

Edgar Musgrave was named an alternate delegate.

ELMER MILLION, (Harlan) who has just completed a year of post graduate work at Yale, was married on September 7th to Miss Zenna Belle Clark of Weatherford, Oklahoma. Brother Million, who made an enviable record both at the University of Oklahoma and at Yale represented his Chapter as a delegate to the National Convention in Chicago in 1934. He is now teaching in the Law School at Southern Methodist.

HOWARD C. VELPMAN (Ross) passed the California Bar Examination in October.

Our Political Mirror

WILLIAM E. BORAH (Kent), of Boise, Idaho, senior United States Senator from Idaho and Dean of the Senate, welcomed President Franklin D. Roosevelt to Boise on the 27th of September when the President stopped there on his way to Seattle. In doing so, he was the first prominent Republican to take part in a welcome to the President on his transcontinental trip. To the old Senate warrior simple courtesy is above party lines and the bitterness of disputes. The Senator also was among those who had luncheon with the President before he set out on a drive to Ontario, Oregon. Upon his return to Washington in October, the Senator expressed his vigorous opposition to the proposed mid-term Republican convention. When the Republican National Committee met at Chicago on the 5th of November, action on the matter was postponed.

F. RYAN DUFFY (Ryan), of Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, junior United States Senator from Wisconsin, was among those who talked with President Roosevelt on his train at Chicago on the 5th of October after he had completed his address. (The President left Hyde Park on the 22nd of September and returned on the 6th of October.) Brother Duffy recently announced his candidacy for renomination as United States Senator on the Democratic ticket next year. Since then, it has been reported that Governor Philip F. LaFollette has decided to be a candidate for an unprecedented fourth term. This eliminates the prospect of him becoming a candidate against Brother Duffy. In addition, it will help President Roosevelt because he will not have to choose between the Senator and Governor LaFollette.

MILLARD E. TYDINGS (Jay), of Havre de Grace, Maryland, senior United States Senator from Maryland, was among the delegation of Senators and Representatives that visited the Hawaiian Islands in October to make a first hand study of conditions. He sailed from Los Angeles on the Malolo on the 1st of October. The delegation had to return early because President Roosevelt called a Special Session of Congress for the 15th of November. The expenses of the trip were paid by the Hawaiian legislature. Brother Tydings passed through Kansas City while the annual meeting of the American Bar Association was convened there.

RICHEY V. GRAHAM (Blackstone), of Chicago, Illinois, State Senator from the 19th Senatorial District, announced on the 15th of October that he would not be a candidate for reelection next year. He was elected to the House of Representatives of the General Assembly in 1928 and to the Senate in 1930 and was reelected in 1934. In 1933 he was elected as President Pro Tempore of the Senate and served for four years. His present term expires in January 1939. Brother Graham, a Democrat, is a son-in-law of the late Anton J. Cermak, Mayor of Chicago, and moved to 1341 Park Avenue in River Forest recently. "I am retiring from the Senate," he said, "but I shall still continue to take an active part in politics."

TELLER AMMONS (Hughes), of Denver, Colorado, Governor of Colorado, was the principal speaker at a dinner sponsored by the Larimer County Democratic Central Committee which was held at Fort Collins, Colorado, on the 28th of October. The dinner was in celebration of the election of the entire Democratic state ticket last year.

HAROLD H. BURTON (Hay), of Cleveland, Ohio, was reelected as Mayor of the City of Cleveland at the election which was held on the 2nd of November. In his campaign he pledged the elimination of labor rackets and Eliot Ness, his Director of Public Safety, is hard at work endeavoring to stop racketeering. Brother Burton is a Republican.

JOHN D. M. HAMILTON (Fuller), of Topeka, Kansas, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, presided at the meeting of the committee which was held at the Palmer House at Chicago, Illinois, on the 5th of November. It was reported over the radio several weeks after the meeting that he expects to resign shortly and will be succeeded by William R. Castle, Jr., former Assistant Secretary of State. In recent weeks he has been meeting with Republican leaders in the several states and has also discussed matters with Honorable Alf M. Landon at Topeka. On Sunday, the 28th of November, Brother Hamilton declared in Washington that the policies adopted by the Roosevelt administration to "handcuff, shackle and hog tie" legitimate business were responsible for the present slump. Warning that the slump, if not curbed, might assume disastrous proportions and pave the way for dictatorship, he denied that the Republican Party favored "rear guard" action, or "a return to days that have gone by." But, he said, the ultimate test of progressive measures must be the extent to which they can be made to work within the framework of the democratic system and serve the best interests of the average man and woman. The tax on undistributed profits prevents business from saving for "a rainy day" and from keeping their employes steadily employed. He also opposed the capital gains tax in its present form.

LEON A. ZICK (Fuller), of Oregon, Illinois, was nominated as Judge of the Circuit Court for the 15th Judicial Circuit at the Republican Judicial Convention which was held at Freeport on the 14th of October. The following day, LOUIS A. NACK (Campbell), of Galena, was nominated for the same office by the Democratic Judicial Convention which was held at Oregon. The election will be held on the 7th of December and inasmuch as this Circuit has always been Republican, it is expected that Brother Zick will be elected. He is at present County Judge of Ogle County, having been elected twelve years ago. At the time of his election he was the youngest County Judge in the state. In recent months he has also served as Acting County Judge of Lee and Stephenson Counties. Brother Zick was a roommate of JOHN D. M. HAMILTON (Fuller) at Northwestern University.

WILLIAM P. LAMBERTSON (Marshall), of Fairview, Kansas, is expected to be a candidate for renomination as Representative in Congress from the 1st Congressional District. He is a Republican, a member of the powerful Appropriations Committee and is serving his fifth term. Brother Lambertson has been active in the Republican Party for many years.

FRANCIS E. WALTER (Taft), of Easton, Pennsylvania, is expected to be a candidate for renomination as Representative in Congress from the 21st Congressional District. He is a Democrat, a member of the important Committee on the Judiciary, and is serving his third term.

JOSEPH E. HENDERICKS (Brewer), of DeLand, Florida, is expected to be a candidate for renomination as Representative in Congress from the 5th Congressional District. He is a Democrat, a member of the Committee on Post Office and Post Roads, and is serving his first term. Prior to his election last year he had been engaged in the general practice of law at DeLand.

ORAL P. TUTTLE (Fuller), of Harrisburg, Illinois, is expected to be a candidate for renomination as State Senator from the 51st Senatorial District at the primary election next April. He is a Republican and is serving his first term. Brother Tuttle also served as a member of the House of Representatives of the General Assembly from 1914-18 and as Republican State Central Committeeman for the 24th Congressional District from 1932-34. He is also a former Assistant Attorney General, having been appointed by Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom when he occupied this post at Springfield.

EVERETT LEWIS (Magruder), of Benton, Illinois, is expected to be a candidate for renomination as County Judge of Franklin County. He is a Democrat and is serving his second term. His brother, Louie E. Lewis, of Sesser, Speaker of the House of Representatives of the General Assembly, is being prominently mentioned as a candidate for the nomination as United States Senator on the Democratic ticket.

ALBEN W. BARKLEY (Clay), of Paducah, Kentucky, senior United States Senator from Kentucky, is expected to be a candidate for renomination on the Democratic ticket. He is serving his second term and is Chairman of the Library Committee and a member of the Committees on Banking and Currency, Expenditures in the Executive Departments, Finance and Interstate Commerce. Prior to his election to the Senate he served fourteen years in the House of Representatives. Last July he was elected as Majority Leader of the Senate to succeed the late Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas. Following a conference with the President on the 27th of November, Brother Barkley announced that it would be impossible for Congress to provide any tax relief for stricken business at the Special Session. He said that he had talked at length with the President at the White House about taxes but that no conclusion was reached. This announcement dashed all hopes for immediate reduction or repeal of the tax on undistributed profits and capital gains.

CLAUDE PEPPER (Fletcher), of Tallahassee, Florida, junior United States Senator from Florida, accompanied President Roosevelt from Washington to Miami on the 27th of November. Arriving at Miami on the 29th, the President left his special train and boarded the yacht Potomac for several days fishing off the Florida coast. Brother Pepper succeeded the late DUNCAN U. FLETCHER last year for the term ending January 3, 1939, and is expected to be a candidate for renomination next year. C., Attorney General of the United States, in an address before the Associated Grocery Manufacturers of America, Inc., at New York on the 29th of November, called upon the Nation to destroy monopoly. "Unless we destroy monopoly," he said, "monopoly will destroy most of our reforms, and, in the end, lower the standards of our common life." The expected attack of the administration upon monopolistic practices is still in the formative stage. Robert H. Jackson, Assistant Attorney General, said in Miami after talking with President Roosevelt. Jackson, who is in charge of antitrust prosecutions, boarded the yacht Potomac with the President, carrying with him data on antitrust prosecutions and studies that the Department of Justice has been making in preparation for suggested new legislation to improve enforcement. In his address the Attorney General likened prosecution under the present laws to searching out "a quarry in the tangled underbrush of an almost impenetrable forest." He also said that comprehensive hearings and studies, leading to clarification, restatement and rigid enforcement, were needed. In recent weeks the Attorney General has been requested to institute quo warranto proceedings against the Honorable Hugo L. Black, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. It is reported that an attempt will be made to have Congress instruct the Attorney General to proceed. In order that the integrity and standing of the Supreme Court may be maintained, it is hoped that the right of Mr. Justice Black to serve as a member of the court may be determined by a decision of the court.

SCOTT W. LUCAS (Capen), of Havana, Illinois, Representative in Congress from the 20th Congressional District, was applauded in the House of Representatives at Washington when he declared on the 30th of November that the business recession "overshadowed" all other considerations of Congress. Gaining the floor to speak on the proposed farm bill, he asserted that from Illinois he was hearing more complaints from business men than from the farmer or laborer. Business is seeking repeal of the excess profits and surplus corporation taxes, he said. "Business feels that with the repeal of these two measures, it could expand its normal activities into many economic fields. Business has no hesitation in saying that, if given the opportunity to function without these restrictions, order will supplant chaos, confidence will destroy uncertainty, and business again will start an upward climb. I submit in all sincerity that we should not wait until the regular session in January before taking action. Let us strike immediately following the disposition of this farm bill. The boldness of our action will restore national confidence." He also declared that an admission by the administration that it had made a mistake in imposing the business taxes would demonstrate real political prudence. Brother Lucas was referring to the fact that the taxes were imposed at the last session of Congress at the request of President Roosevelt. Scoffing at the charges of some of the left wing members that the recession was a plot of big business or Wall Street, he said that it did not make sense to say that business leaders would seek to throw America into another depression. Brother Lucas is expected to be a candidate for nomination as United States Senator at the primary election next April. He is a Democrat.

③ WILLIAM O. DOUGLAS (Livingston), of Washington, D. C., was elected as Chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission on the 21st of September. At his first press interview following his election, he explained his philosophy. He made it plain that the Commission will pursue with even greater determination its intent to rid the markets of all artificial forces. He said that simple honesty should prevail in all transactions and that the period that lies ahead must be a period of action. On the 23rd of November the administration cracked down on Wall Street. "Adequate safeguards" must be thrown about the New York and other exchanges, either by the markets themselves or the Commission, Brother Douglas said. This surprise move recalled that Wall Street financiers and administration leaders have been hurling recriminations, blaming each other in part for the present business recession. In announcing his ultimatum to the Exchanges, the Chairman said that figures on activity of exchange members in recent stock market slumps serve only to fortify further the conclusion indicated repeatedly in our studies that members of the exchange trading for their own account either create the daily price fluctuations or else contribute materially to their severity. He asserted that he prefers to have the exchanges reform themselves to prevent artificial fluctuations, but indicated that they were not ready to assume the responsibility and that more extensive commission regulation may result. The Chairman specified that an acceptable plan would have to include: (1) strict punishment of members guilty of "unethical or illegal activities," (2) transfer of exchange management from committees of members to paid and impartial experts, (3) reduction in the number of exchange members, (4) regulations to give full or adequate market effect to the transactions of small investors in odd lot, or less than 100 share, trading, (5) restrictions on floor trading of members and specialists. Brother Douglas became a member of the Commission on January 16, 1936, after Joseph P. Kennedy resigned. There is little doubt now that the new Chairman will do his job as rigorously as possible.

The American Bar Association

The Sixtieth Annual Meeting of the American Bar Association was held at the Municipal Auditorium at Kansas City, Missouri, September 27 to October 1 inclusive. The sessions were impressive, attracted large audiences and resulted in a surprising amount of constructive and well considered action. The Canons of Ethics were revised. Rules and standards for supervising law lists were adopted. A special committee on proposals affecting the Supreme Court of the United States was created to continue the constructive and conserving work commenced last February. The endorsement of the Association was given to the improved form of the proposed uniform rules for the District Courts of the United States. Approval was accorded to noteworthy progress made along lines of cooperation between the press and the bar to lessen prejudicial publicity of judicial proceedings. Support was given to the renewed efforts to broaden and extend legal aid work to fulfill the duty of the Bar to the poor, so that justice will not be denied to anyone for lack of means. The monumental studies by the Special Committee on Administrative Law were received, and the recommendations were endorsed in principle, without acceptance that they are yet ready for introduction as legislative measures. A resolution adopted by the Assembly petitioned the Senate of the United States to establish a rule requiring a full public hearing, before vote on confirmation, as to all nominations for judicial office. As always the annual meeting was a great forum for open discussion, in which many speakers, by invitation or upon their own initiative, presented their views upon many phases of the law as affecting the public welfare. In addition, more persons attended this meeting than any previous annual meeting of the Association.

Military and Naval Service

JOHN J. PERSHING (Lawson), of Washington, D. C., Chairman of the American Battle Monuments Commission, returned from France on Armistice Day. Since 1924 he has made annual trips to France in connection with the work of the Commission and this year completed the same. On the first Armistice Day in 1918, the General, then Commander-in-Chief of the American Expeditionary Forces was at headquarters at Chaumont. While in France this year he dedicated the various war memorials, the last being the memorial near Chateau Thierry. At the 19th annual convention of the American Legion in New York on the 20th of September, National Commander Harry W. Colmery presented the colors to General Pershing by radio and he responded from France.

Brother Pershing, who was seventy-seven years of age on the 13th of September, was born at Laclede, Missouri. His father was boss of a railroad gang and later a farmer. When 13 years of age, John quit school to work on the farm. Ambitious to be a lawyer, he studied law at night. In 1879 he obtained a job as a teacher in Prairie Mount, Missouri, and saved most of the $40.00 per month that he received to study law at the Kirksville Normal School. Then came the incident that changed his whole life. It was an advertisement announcing competitive examinations for the United States Military Academy. He had only two weeks to prepare but he won the appointment. At West Point he was President of his class and first Captain of the Corps of Cadets. Possessing the characteristics of a perfect soldier, his assignments after he graduated were marked with success. While a military instructor at the University of Nebraska, he resumed the study of law and received his degree. Since the Army conducts its own military courts, this gave him an opportunity to combine law with his success as a soldier. When the United States entered the World War, he was made Commander-in-Chief of the American Expeditionary Forces. Later he became General of the Armies.

On his return to the United States in November, General Pershing accepted appointment as Chairman of a newly organized committee of the American Social Hygiene Association which will conduct a national campaign against social diseases.

In Memorium

JOHN E. MARTINEAU (Garland), of Little Rock, Arkansas, Judge of the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Arkansas, died on March 6, 1937, from heart trouble. He was born in Clay County, Missouri, on December 2, 1873. When he was a year old, his family moved to Arkansas and settled in Lonoke County. He was elected to the legislature in 1903 and was reelected two years later. In 1907 he was appointed as Chancellor of the First Chancery District and was reelected three times without opposition, serving for a period of more than nineteen years. On September 13, 1926, he was elected as Governor of Arkansas. He continued to serve as Chancellor until he was inaugurated as Governor the following January. After the Mississippi floods ten years ago he distinguished himself by taking the lead in the fight for flood control. On March 2, 1928, President Calvin Coolidge appointed him as Judge of the District Court of the United States. In selecting a Democrat for this important post, the President overrode the recommendations of his own party. Shortly thereafter he resigned as Governor. Judge Martineau was one of the outstanding men in the public life of his state and made an able record on the Federal Bench.

EDWARD F. DUNNE (Webster), of Chicago, Illinois, former Governor of Illinois, died on May 24, 1937, from heart trouble, after an extended illness. He was born at Waterville, Connecticut, on October 12, 1853. In his early youth, his family moved to Peoria, Illinois. Following his graduation from high school, he studied at Trinity College in Dublin, Ireland. In 1877 he graduated from the Union College of Law in Chicago and was admitted to the Bar. Embarking on the practice of law, he met with immediate success. He was elected as Judge of the Circuit Court of Cook County in 1892 and was reelected twice. In 1905 he resigned from the bench when he was elected as Mayor of Chicago. Following his term as Mayor, he reentered the practice of law. In 1912 he sought the Democratic nomination for Governor. Notwithstanding that Illinois was regarded as a safe Republican state, the split in the Republican Party which resulted in the independent candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt, resulted in the election of Brother Dunne as Governor in November of the same year together with the entire Democratic state ticket. Thus, for the second time since the Civil War a Democratic Governor sat in the State House at Springfield. After serving four years, he again reentered the practice of law which he continued until his death. During the Worlds Fair he served as United States Commissioner. He was the senior member of the law firm of Dunne & Corboy and at the time of his death was attorney for the Board of Election Commissioners.

JOHN JOSEPH KINDRED (Brewer), of Astoria, Long Island, New York, specialist in mental and nervous disorders and former Representative in Congress from the Second Congressional District died at his home on October 23, 1937. He was born in Southampton County, Virginia, on July 15, 1864. He studied medicine at the University of Virginia and the Hospital College of Medicine at Louisville, Kentucky. After graduation from the latter institution in 1889, he went to the University of Edinburgh to study mental diseases before commencing the practice of medicine in New York. In 1896 he founded the River Crest Sanatorium at Astoria, and later the Farm Colony and Sanatorium at Belle Mead, New Jersey, both for mental diseases. He was elected to Congress in 1910, served one term and declined to run again. In 1920 he again sought the office, was elected and served eight years. While in Congress he was a member of the important Committee on Rivers and Harbors. He also introduced considerable medical legislation. Brother Kindred was one of the few persons admitted to practice medicine and law. Both he and his wife were admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States in 1927 by William Howard Taft (Calhoun), Chief Justice of the United States. At the time of his death he was a member of the faculty of the College of Law of the John B. Stetson University at DeLand, Florida, having taught the course in medical jurisprudence the last seven years. He was also consulting physician for several hospitals in New York and had written many articles on mental diseases. In politics, he was a Democrat. His wife, Mrs. Ella W.

Kindred, and a son, Dr. John Cramer Kindred, survive.

GUY C. H. CORLISS (Calhoun), of Portland, Oregon, first Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of North Dakota, died on November 24, 1937, after a long illness. He was born at Poughkeepsie, New York, on July 4, 1858. Studying law in an office in Poughkeepsie, he was admitted to the Bar at Brooklyn in 1879. Along in 1883 he traveled westward to look over the country. He did not remain but returned to New York state the following year. In the fall of 1886 he went to Grand Forks, then Dakota Territory, and when the Territory was divided into two states, he was nominated and elected without opposition the first Chief Justice of the State of North Dakota. The Constitutional Convention had provided that a candidate for the Supreme Court must be thirty-five years of age and have resided five years in the Territory and State. Brother Corliss was only thirty-one and had not lived there quite three years. When the situation became known this clause of the Constitution was recommended to the Committee of the Whole and changed for his special benefit. On August 15, 1898, he resigned to practice law. At the request of President Merryfield of the University of North Dakota, he organized a law school at the University the following year and was selected as the first Dean. Later he resigned as Dean because his law practice required most of his time. He continued, however, to lecture in the school. On February 25, 1911, the Guy C. H. Corliss Chapter of Phi Alpha Delta, was installed at the University. Brother Corliss had already been initiated as an honorary member of John C. Calhoun Chapter at Yale in 1910. In the winter of 1911-12 he became ill and was forced to go farther west. He settled at Portland in June 1912 and engaged in the general practice of law which he continued until his death. His wife, Mrs. Ella V. Corliss, survives him.

National Endowment Fund

Many Brothers have inquired as to how they can make provision to have a small or large part of their estate bequeathed to the National Endowment Fund of Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity.

No act of yours while living can continue to do good things longer after your death than a contribution to the National Endowment Fund of Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity. The following form of provision in your Will is suggested to effect the contribution:

I give and bequeath to the National Endowment Fund of Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity the sum of $....., and hereby authorize my Executors to pay said amount to the persons who shall then be acting as Trustees of said Endowment Fund.

National Alumni Fee

The most important action of the convention was the enactment of a new section in the By-Laws providing for a National Alumni fee. For many years we have sought some means whereby a portion of the financial expense of the fraternity could be borne by the alumni instead of requiring our collegiate chapters to carry all of the burden. The new section provides for an annual fee payable to the Supreme Secretary in the amount of $3.00 per year, unless the alumnus shall be a life subscriber to the official magazine, in which event the per capita tax shall be $2.00. The payment of the per capita tax provided for in this section shall entitle the member to a subscription to the official magazine, to all issues of the Directory with black face type indicating that the alumnus is a supporting member, to bulletins and other services which the fraternity may from time to time render.

No attempt was made to provide means for the enforcement of the collection of this fee, nor were any penalties provided for the non-payment, the delegates feeling that a majority of the members of the fraternity would willingly and voluntarily pay this amount each year toward the support of the organization. Send in the coupon appearing on this page of the Reporter with your remittance and the address which you desire to appear in the next directory.

In addition to receiving four issues of a splendid magazine, current directories as they are published and maintaining an active connection with and interest in your fraternity, you will be aiding materially in its continued progress. Do this right now.
